Will your fiber internet work during a power outage?

Our office and cabinets, which house the main connections for your service, are battery back-uped in case of power outages and will remain operational for extended periods of time. In addition, because our system runs under ground, it is highly resilient to any above ground issues such as thunderstorms, ice storms or any other power grid interruptions.

Although we have taken steps to ensure your internet service is not disrupted, there is one crucial step we suggest you, as the customer, take if you desire your internet to work during a power outage.

Once the service reaches your home the fiber line connects into an ONT (Optical Network Terminal) then extends to your wireless router. Both the ONT and router need power to function. If you don't have a battery back-up for the ONT or router, you will lose your internet connection in the event of a power failure.

A Universal Power Supply (UPS) is the answer to the problem. It will provide power to those devices in a power outage, allowing you to continue working or to see what the weather is doing on your laptop or tablet. UPS's come in many different sizes lasting different lengths of time.

Please contact our office and we can help match one to fit your needs.

In observance of Labor Day, our office will be closed on Monday, September 4th.
